New Vault

"Some papers have been treated in the past, but some are in pretty tough shape," Hamilton said. "The ancient material will be more under control here. Older stuff will be enclosed in acid-free envelopes and cabinet space will be available."

Sliding map drawers already contain some school materials, as the vault is also intended to house records for all town departments.

"Nobody knows when a new Town Hall will be available or ready, so whether the town cares to look at this arrangement as permanent or a stopgap measure is anybody's guess," Hamilton said. "I look at it as permanent. He added, however, that the fire door can be reused in another location."

Selectman Arthur Clark views the vault situation as temporary. "We had to get a special permit from the Secretary of State's Office as it is, he said, referring to the new vault's four-hour fireproof door. "We're supposed to have a six-hour fireproof door."

The heating pipes that pass through the room will help to keep the temperature constant, Hamilton said, although Clark was concerned that the room would be too warm in the summer. "We'll wait on adding air-conditioning and de-humidifiers," Hamilton said.

Current records will still be kept at Town Hall, Hamilton said. The Accounting Department, for one, must hold three years' worth of records for ready perusal at Town Hall.

The moving of the records is anticipated to begin this week. "A lot of these materials are just interesting things," attested Noel Ripley, chairman of the Historical Commission.

The bill of sale for the town clock and the record of the conscription of money to have the clock mounted are two valuable pieces of history for the town, and personally for Ripley, who engineered the renovation of the four-faced clock on the Common.

Hamilton hopes to have all the records cross-indexed, so they can be traced with the vault and back to the department where they originated.
